DP WORLD NEWS BOXBAY WINS GERMAN LOGISTICS PRIZE

BOXBAY, a revolutionary automated, safe, and environmentally friendly High Bay Storage (HBS) container yard stacking system, has won the German Award for Supply Chain Management 2022. DP World developed BOXBAY in a joint venture with industrial engineering specialists SMS group. They were presented with the award at a ceremony in Berlin after being selected by a jury of industry leaders as part of the International Supply Chain Conference.

The award recognised the system as an "exemplary concept" developed and implemented despite the recent challenges faced by the industry. It offers an innovative solution to some of the key challenges in container port logistics, combining increased efficiency with environmental targets.

The massive steel structure contains stacking cranes running between rows of container bays. It works like a library -- except each book can weigh 40 tonnes. Each container is stacked in an individual bay while the stacking cranes glide between them, picking out any container without having to move the boxes above or below it. This eliminates the unproductive reshuffling seen in conventional storage systems.
